I LOVE COLOURS.

Fluorescent orange, garish green and aqua blue – the 1970s and 80s were dominated by a parade of colourful cars out on our streets. Bright, cheerful and lively cars everywhere. And today? We prefer to be a little less “out there”. A range of colours that comprises more than just questions of taste.

Although the main purpose of paint is to protect the car's body from corrosion, a car's paintwork also plays a key role in its success. Colours reflect both the spirit of the times and our attitude towards life. For example, the bright Marino Yellow paint for the first generation of the Golf in 1974 reflected a feeling of optimism, a carefree lifestyle and disco fever. In contrast, the more muted colours we see on cars today mirror a low-key love of progress, minimalism and a sense of seriousness. And what about tomorrow? Volkswagen's colour scouts are already out on the streets studying colour trends from the worlds of interior design, fashion, art and architecture. Every decade in the automotive world has its own palette of colours that makes it stand out from the rest. This palette is becoming more and more diverse and more and more individual. Always Volkswagen.

80 models. Three sizes. 55 colours. This Volkswagen model car catalogue opens up a whole kaleidoscope of exciting Volkswagen vehicles, perfectly crafted and in their original production colours. Take one home: a car that made history or one that is conquering the streets right now. Discover amazing colours, dazzling even in miniature form. A colour for every Volkswagen fan and model car enthusiast.

XL1

THE FUTURE IS TAKING SHAPE.

Raising expectations. Pushing boundaries. Setting new standards.
The Volkswagen XL1 is the result of the company's quest to create a 1-litre car. With ground-breaking technology, exceptional aerodynamics and a design that puts efficiency at the fore.
Down to the smallest detail.

Lightweight Frame.
With a kerb weight of just 795 kilograms, it is the lightest Volkswagen of all time. And no other series production vehicle in the world has a lower drag coefficient than the XL1 at just 0.189.

Award-Winning Design.
The XL1. With its striking, new shape focused on functionality, the car attracted the attention of the Design Museum in London who awarded it the title of "Design of the Year" in the "Transport Design" category.

Futuristic
The wing doors swing upwards and slightly towards the front of the vehicle. This not only looks good, it also makes getting in and out of the car easy.

The Volkswagen XL1 attracts attention wherever it goes. Driving down the road and seeing people trying to snap it on their smartphones, you can't help but be reminded of paparazzi trying to catch an A-list star. Volkswagen's most eye-catching vehicle is its technological frontrunner, proving that great things can come in small packages. It is the brand's first ever diesel plug-in hybrid in series production and reflects just how far the car maker has come in its quest to reduce fuel consumption. But how much fuel can you save before you start compromising on other things? How is a car that consumes so little fuel still able to achieve 69 PS?

Sitting behind the wheel of the XL1 makes you feel like part of the future of mobility. The XL1 is about adopting a new attitude to life, and experiencing tomorrow today. The driver is also able to take on an active role in issues concerning the future of the environment. Speaking about Volkswagen's approach to the project, Dr Neußer, the head engineer for the XL1, describes it as an "attempt to push the boundaries of physics without losing sight of the benefit for the driver." Volkswagen engineers therefore looked closely at how future technologies could be implemented into series production. However, it would have to be series production on a small scale as the XL1 is considered to be "too much" for the mass market. The uniqueness of the XL1 starts with the wing mirrors – it does not have any. Instead of mirrors, cameras are embedded in the wing doors which show the area behind the vehicle. This means that the head wind slips past the vehicle more easily than in vehicles with conventional wing mirrors. The cameras' images are transferred straight to the monitors in the cockpit in real time. The futuristic-looking rear wheel covers also help to reduce turbulence and improve aerodynamics. All of this creates a new driving experience and gives the driver the feeling of gliding. Volkswagen designers have managed to create a vehicle that already has the potential to become a style icon. With its top of the range technology, ground-breaking functions and eye-catching design, the XL1 is certainly inspirational.

It All Started with a Model.

Our vision:
A 1-litre car suited to everyday use, where the term efficiency becomes synonymous with an exciting driving experience. The Volkswagen XL1 has brought this vision to life.

XL1
What will the car of tomorrow look like? That is the question on everyone's lips. Is the XL1 the missing link in the story of the low-consumption car of the future?
The fuel consumption: 0.9 l/100 km.

WITH A LOVE FOR DETAIL.

He has turned his hobby into a career. To put it more precisely: His enthusiasm for model cars led to Stefan Müller directing his attention towards the real thing. A passion transformed:

The friendly 45-year-old is now employed in the development of Volkswagen R vehicles. We met the passionate model car collector in the Zeithaus building at the Autostadt in Wolfsburg. Strolling through 100 years of automotive history, he explains why 1:87 scale cars are his favourites and which models really make his heart race.

A Historical Figure in Miniature Form.

Stefan Müller likes to collect pieces of automotive history, preferably at the scale of 1:87. He is particularly fond of cars from the 60s and 70s thanks to their selection of bright colours.

Volkswagen History You Can Touch.

The miniature version of the Golf 1 in the Zeithaus building at the Autostadt in Wolfsburg.

Interview with Stefan Müller.

Talking about a passion for collecting and cars.

INTERVIEW: KAREN KELLER PHOTOS: NINA STILLER

Tell us about your collection: Which models are your favourites and do you prefer a particular scale? Nearly all of my models are 1:87 scale. I bought my first model with my pocket money when I was still in primary school. It was a red Golf 1 and cost 2 Deutsche marks from the shop around the corner. I've still got it today. Back then, I also collected trucks, buses and utility vehicles. However, I tend to focus more on cars these days, mainly for space reasons. I also like to collect models from my local area, such as a fire engine from my home town or historic removal vans from a local transportation company.

Why do you collect model cars? I've always been fascinated by cars, even the small ones. Model cars just seem so precise. It all started with a simple childish curiosity and a passion for cars. I even played with my models back in those days. If I ever decide to sell them on, they will show signs of coming from a loving home. After a while, it turned from playing with cars to collecting them. I started putting my models on display in my cupboard until I bought my first cabinet.

Which models in your collection are you most proud of? An 1:87 Santana made from real silver. It was made to celebrate the 10th year of the joint venture between Volkswagen and China. I discovered it in a model car shop a few years later. It is a true rare find. I have also made a few models myself. For example, I copied my first car in the scale 1:87. I like to add things like some extra fog lights or wing mirrors. All you need is a pair of tweezers, a little bit of skill and you're ready to go. I also make models for friends. Everyone loves a copy of his car in miniature format; it's always a popular gift.

You don't seem to have lost any of your passion for model cars? What is it about them that you like so much? Well, you have to like cars. That goes without saying. Some people see it as a chance to turn their childhood dreams into a reality. Most of them don't get the chance to drive their dream cars, so model cars are the perfect solution. Another great thing: There is no age restriction when it comes to collecting model cars. Although some people may think so, it's not a hobby for fuddy duddies. Younger collectors are really passionate too. At collectors' fairs, you'll meet everyone from little tots to more experienced collectors.

Which model do you still need to add to your collection? I am desperate for the rarest and most expensive Wiking model, a Thyssen tank car from the 1950s. You sometimes see them at auctions and collectors' fairs where they usually go for around €10,000. If I had one, I wouldn't be letting go of it in a hurry. I'm still missing a few more modern cars as well. A special package containing all 7 generations of the Golf was launched together with the Golf 7. However, I didn't have the chance to get one. It was a limited edition package and was only given to journalists.

What tips do you have for beginners? What should you look out for? To begin with, you should pick a particular type of vehicle and a particular scale to collect; it's just down to what you like and what interests you really. If you are looking for a particular model, the best place to find them is a collectors' fair. It's a great place to get to know other collectors. A cabinet is the best way to keep your models dust-free. Just make sure you don't put it in direct sunlight. Plastic model cars may start to melt in high temperatures. Apart from that, miniature cars are really easy to look after. Anyone who's interested in collecting cars can start straight away!

Classic

MAGIC MOMENTS IN HISTORY.

It keeps on running and running and running ... even in the toughest driving conditions: Did you know that the legendary Volkswagen Beetle once went exploring? In 1963, a ruby red version of the classic car made it to Antarctica. Freezing temperatures, snow storms and crevasses were nothing to the power of the air-cooled engine. Thanks to its exceptional design, the Antarctica Beetle soon became indispensable to the team of Australian research scientists. A car that made history.

Our series of classic model cars looks back at this impressive model along with other Volkswagen favourites.

Here Comes the “Red Terror”.

The “Antarctica 1” Beetle

The term “Globetrotter” is not an exaggeration in this case – this Beetle, the original classic car, overcame the toughest driving conditions to conquer the Antarctic. Known as the “Red Terror”, the model version of the Antarctic research vehicle would love the chance to warm up in your display cabinet. Smuggling its way into the car: a miniature penguin from the South Pole.
